This book was created by the Kinship-ND staff (Christiana Pond & Emily Marboe), Charley Joyce, and the Foster Care handbook.

Updated April 2023

This handbook is intended to be used as a reference as you care for children in Kinship care. It gives you practical information on topics like medical care, communication, and behaviors. It also provides guidance on areas such as welcoming a child, discipline, and visitation. Our kinship families vary by those who are involved with Human Service zone caseworkers to those who have various types of agreements with the birth parents. Our goal is that this handbook will help you with where you are in the kinship journey.

You provide a valuable service in helping children through difficulties and meeting their needs in a time of crisis and change. We offer this manual as an aid to your role as a North Dakota kinship caregiver.

Handbook acknowledgements

Children and Family Services (CFS) of the North Dakota Department of Health and Human Services wishes to thank the many individuals who contributed to this manual, specifically

- Charley Joyce, LICSW
- Foster Care handbook and those who created it

Limitations and liability

This handbook cannot address every facet of being a kinship caregiver. We have addressed those areas which were mentioned in focus groups during 2019 and from current caregivers in the Kinship-ND program. We try to maintain the handbook with accurate and relevant information.

This handbook is not intended to be a substitute for professional advice, diagnosis, medical treatment, or therapy. Always seek the advice of your physician or qualified mental health provider with any questions you may have regarding any mental health symptom or medical condition. Never disregard professional psychological or medical advice nor delay in seeking professional advice or treatment because of information you have obtained from this handbook.

If there are errors or content needed, please contact kinship@nd.gov

What is a kinship caregiver?

For the purpose of this handbook and the Kinship-ND program, a kinship caregiver is defined as a relative, member of tribe or clan, godparent, stepparent, or other adult who has a relationship with a child and provides full-time care, nurturing, and protection of the child(ren).

Chapter 1: Being a Kinship Caregiver

Your role as a kinship caregiver

Children can feel significant personal loss when separated from their families. They have lost the most important people in their lives – their parents, possibly siblings, and extended family. They have lost their familiar pattern of living, their homes, and the places that make up their own world, such as familiar schools and neighborhoods. They are fearful and unsure of what is to come. They often grieve for multiple losses which can cause a loss of self-esteem, sense of identity, and ability to control the events around them. Which is why kinship care is so important – it keeps the child with those people they have a connection with and reduces the amount of loss for the child.

Taking the child(ren) into your home adds to your original role and hopefully you can find a way to blend the two. Whether you were the grandparent, aunt, godparent, or neighbor, you are now also taking on the role of parent. For some this is an easy transition, for others it will be more difficult, but our hope is to help you through this transition for the sake of the child(ren).

You need to ensure the safety and protection of the child(ren). You will also need to help them understand what has happened and how to heal from it. To achieve this, you need to reach out for support from your friends and family, and maybe a pastor or counselor. Find resources to help you identify and learn what will work best for you and the child(ren) in your home.

Your role may be short term, long term, or even permanent. If possible, you may need to set specific boundaries with the parent of the children to protect the children or help the parent work towards reunification.

The role and life you had before will shift. You may experience a wide range of emotions due to this shift. These shifts and emotions are a normal part of the process of becoming a kinship caregiver.

Set boundaries

Part of becoming a kinship caregiver is the blending of roles. Were you the fun aunt or “never said no” grandpa? You now need to find a way to add the parenting aspects. An important way to do this is creating boundaries and finding the balance. You can still be the grandpa they love even when you say no.

Look at what your role was before and what boundaries you had. Then look at what is best for the child. Each child is different and will have different needs. Some children will need a firm clear picture of what is expected and what can and cannot be done. This may be their personality, or it could be how they are healing from the trauma of being moved. Knowing what to expect and setting boundaries can provide comfort and control to a scary unknown situation.

Once you have identified what your role was before and what is needed for the children, you need to look at what you need. For example, did you let the children stay up past their bedtime when they came to visit you? You will need to create a bedtime routine for the child now, otherwise you may become burnt out and exhausted and the children may have more adverse behaviors due to not getting the sleep they need. If you have other caregivers in the home, whether it is a spouse, older children, or even a roommate, have everyone get on the same page for what the boundaries need to be.

If the child you are caring for resists your efforts to set new boundaries, understand that their resistance is normal. Most of us want relationships to remain unchanged because they are familiar to us and comfortable. Recognize and empathize with the child(ren) that you understand that they too are adjusting to you becoming their primary caregiver. Additionally, they may resist you becoming their primary caregiver as an extension of their own grieving process of not being with their parents.

Advocacy On Behalf Of Children In Kinship Care

If a child that you are caring for in kinship care has challenges that need attention, you may find yourself in a role where you need to advocate on behalf of the child. Examples of where advocacy needs may exist includes schools, law enforcement, social settings, medical settings, organized activities, your own and extended family, and child welfare organizations.

Additionally, in an effort to advocate for better recognition and services for kinship families, you might advocate with legislative representatives. There are various organizations that provide advocacy assistance. In North Dakota, Protection and Advocacy provides a number of advocacy services and can be reached at 800-472-2670. Two national organizations that provide advocacy information and other resources are Court Appointed Special Advocates (CASA) and North American Council on Adoptable Children (NACAC) Both organizations have website that provide extensive information.

- If you find yourself in an advocacy role, here are some things to consider:
- Know your legal status in regard to care of the child – Do you have Power of Attorney (POA), Guardianship, Tribal Custody?
- Try to be as specific as possible in your concern
- For school issues:
 - Know if the child you are caring for is on an IEP, a 504 plan, or has received special education services in the past (for more information, please see IEP (Individualized Education Program))
 - Identify who is your contact at the school for concerns
 - Organize any school records you might have. Review the records regarding accuracy and appropriateness. Inform the current school where previous records could be requested
 - Ask to meet your child's teacher prior to school starting or shortly afterwards. If

- the child has moved during the school year, ask to speak to the new teacher as soon as possible.
- Educate the school personnel regarding your child's needs.

Self-Care

Self-care is vital to your success as a kinship caregiver. This is not being selfish, it is essential. It is easy to become overwhelmed and frustrated as you care for a child in kinship care. Unfortunately, an overly tired and stressed caregiver can easily respond to a child's needs in a manner that is disappointing to both the child and caregiver. Self-care is simply taking time for yourself or continuing with tasks you enjoy. You may not have as much time to do everything you enjoyed before, but you do not want to completely lose who you are during this time. Additionally, self-care is good modeling for children as they learn that positive hobbies and habits create healthy coping skills.

- Try to keep hobbies or start hobbies- you can even do some hobbies with the kids. Try teaching children's activities that you enjoy and that can calm a child and be easily mastered. Various forms of art can be a great outlet for the caregiver and child.
- Keep a journal - sometimes having a way to write down your emotions helps you sort through and understand things. Journals are also a great tool to help you identify cues of when you need a break.
- Reach out to people – get a babysitter and go out to coffee with a friend or speak with a counselor.

Most adults connect best with people that have shared life experiences. If you know other kinship care providers, reach out to them. If your area has a support group for kinship caregivers, check out a kinship support group meeting. If the area in which you live does not have a support group for kinship providers, consider starting one.

Remember, you are also going through a transition and a shift in your role; you need to care for yourself just as much as you need to care for the child. You won't be able to do everything you used to but figure out what will work best for you and your new normal.

Reach out to other people when needing advice and comfort. It helps in remembering you are not alone. Beyond connecting with people you know, you can also connect with people online who are going through a similar experience. Below are some online support groups and forums.

CHAPTER 2: When a Child Comes into Kinship Care

How Placements Affect Children

Children can feel significant personal loss when separated from their families. They have lost the most important people in their lives – their parents, possibly siblings, and extended family. They have lost their familiar pattern of living, their home, and the places that make up their own world. Even if the care they were receiving in their own home was substandard and problematic, it was still home and familiar. They are fearful of what is to come. They lose self-esteem, a sense of identity, and ability to control the events around them.

Children's reactions to separation vary. Their reactions are influenced by several factors:

- Nature of the loss
- Age and development at the time of the loss
- Degree of attachment to the persons from whom the child is being separated
- Ability to understand why the separation took place
- Emotional strength or resilience
- Cultural influences
- Circumstances causing the loss
- Number of previous separations
- Help given before, during and after the separation
- Their relationship with the people with whom they are placed

Upon removal a child may show signs of grief including a lack of understanding of what and why this has happened to them and their family, shock/denial, anger (acting out), sadness in mood, guilt feelings, and regression of behaviors. Physical reactions to placement may also occur such as upper respiratory infection, stomach aches, sleep difficulties, or headaches, all of which can be connected to an increased level of anxiety and stress experienced by the child. Children often feel abandoned, helpless, worthless, confused, and feel responsible for the family's breakup. There will be a period of adjustment for children placed in your care. Do not be surprised if the child has difficulty concentrating and retaining information as this is a common symptom of the child being preoccupied and overwhelmed with their removal. Understandably, there may be times of regression in behaviors, mood fluctuations, or struggles for the child during the transition into kinship placement.

Tips for Dealing with Separation of Child from Parent(s):

- Let the child grieve or mourn for his or her parents. At the time of leaving their home, a child may feel a great sense of loss regardless of the parents' past behavior or the circumstances that led to moving. Help the child move through the grieving process.
- Recognize that it is common for children to view living with you as a punishment for some real or imagined bad deed such as the breakup of their families. Listen to children

- when they express such thoughts and feelings.
- Allow children to share memories about their family. Let them openly express their feelings.
 - Help the child feel safe and cared for.
 - Understand your own loss and grief issues.
 - If you have questions or concerns, share them with your support system (family, friends, pastor/priest, therapist, etc.).
 - Do not speak negatively about the child's own parents, as they may be hypersensitive to how you view their parents.

The most important first step of the process is to help the child feel SAFE! If a child feels safe, they will be much more likely to acclimate to their new environment and adjust to the changes more quickly. A child who comes into your home will need to adjust to many new things. At the same time, you will need to make some adjustments and accommodations. Everything is new for all individuals involved - new parents, maybe new sisters and brothers, a new house, bedroom, foods, rules, new expectations, a new neighborhood, and possibly a new school. If a child feels SAFE, it will help make the other adjustments easier.

It is hard for children to leave their homes and find themselves in new surroundings. To deal with this, children may fantasize and idolize about the positive qualities of their own parents, their own home, and their neighborhood. They may not want to get involved in your family's routine and activities out of a sense of loyalty to their own family. Outbursts of angry, aggressive language or behavior may occur, such as cursing or slamming doors. Even if they show no emotion, many questions, fears, and anxieties about the future may fill their thoughts and dreams. The child needs your understanding, patience, and support when settling into your home.

To Do and Not To Do When Welcoming the Child:

- Attempt to assess the child's mood upon entering your home. Do they want to talk, or are they emotional to the point where they just want to sit with someone?
- When the time is right, welcome the child into your home by giving them a "tour" of the home to show them where they will sleep, where the family eats, gathers, etc.
- As you are providing a "tour" of the home, gently explain family rules such as food rules, proper attire, physical boundary rules, bathroom rules. Frequently ask them if they understand the rules and have questions.
- Ask the child what helps them feel safe, especially at night. Ask them what causes them to be scared.
- If the child has questions about their parents that you cannot answer, write the questions down with the child and tell them you will attempt to get answers from proper authorities. (Example- the caseworker)
- Ask the child if there are special possessions that they have in which they find comfort. If those possessions were lost in the process of transition, attempt to locate or replace them.

- Ask them if there are certain foods they like or dislike.
- Ask them if there are certain activities they enjoy.
- Ask them who are special people in their lives.
- Children must have a place to keep personal possessions. (Ex: dresser, nightstand, space in a closet etc.)
- Let children unpack in their own time. Offer to help or just let them know where to put their things whenever they are ready to unpack.
- Let children know it is allowed and OK! to put a picture of their mom, dad, brothers, sisters, up in their bedroom and that you understand how important these people are to them.
- Be sensitive to their feelings. Ask permission before hugging or touching children. Some families have implemented the 3 H's- asking children if they would prefer a Handshake, High five, or a Hug as their form of greeting!
- Do not try to change things like their hair, clothing, or anything that tells a child, "You're not OK the way you are."
- Depending on the age of the children, you should discuss with the child what kinship care is and what they can expect from you.
- Help them settle down to a regular routine as quickly as possible, but do not be disappointed if they do not respond right away.
- Provide opportunities for the child to talk to you, but do not pry into their past or criticize their parents.
- Do not make children answer if they choose not to respond. Give them time!
- Respect their right to privacy. Never talk about them when they are present or able to overhear you, unless it is appropriate to include them in the conversation, for example, "Ms. Wilson, Andrew is doing so well in his new school."
- Help children develop a sense of pride and accomplishment by giving them tasks within their abilities. Let them know regularly how much you appreciate their help.
- Catch them being good by noticing the little things! Reflect back to the child specifically what you see to celebrate their great choices. This will assist in growing self-esteem and encourage more successes.
- Things like bed-wetting and soiling may be a reaction to the unfamiliarity/fear of a new environment. Shaming or punishing them will make the problem worse. Rather than using punishment, use positive techniques to help.
- Discipline must be constructive or educational in nature. No child may be kicked, bitten, punched, spanked, shaken, pinched, roughly handled, or struck with an inanimate object.
- NEVER threaten a child who misbehaves with removal from your home.
- If the child has a case manager, contact them when questions or concerns arise.
- Expect that you may have to repeat information that you discussed when a child entered your home as the circumstances of removal are overwhelming and traumatic which significantly interferes with a child's ability to comprehend and recall information.

Adapting and Shifting Family Routines:

The everyday routine of your family may take place without much thought or discussion. All families have a pattern of behaving and living together that works for them. Your home may have a schedule that you regularly follow, or it may vary and be quite flexible.

The kinds of routine a child brings to your family will depend on where and with whom the child has been living. It is important to incorporate some of the child's routine into your family, when appropriate. Some children may come to you from families where there were few rules and no set schedule.

Most children will need some time alone to become comfortable with their space. They will need time to watch the family's routine before they can actively participate. Think about some of your family's routines that might take a child some time to learn. For example:

- ✓ Who typically gets up first, and who usually goes to bed last?
- ✓ Is there a morning routine or schedule for getting ready, using the bathroom, etc.?
- ✓ Is it acceptable to have phones present at mealtime?
- ✓ Do children get a snack after school?
- ✓ Do they get a snack before going to bed?
- ✓ Can people help themselves to things in the refrigerator or cupboard?

To help a child adjust to your family, remember to spend "fun time" with the children. Ideas include, but are not limited to:

- ✓ Bake cookies/bars
- ✓ Cook supper
- ✓ Go for walks in favorite places (in a park, by the lake)
- ✓ Paint fingernails
- ✓ Color in a coloring book
- ✓ Go rollerblading or for a bike ride
- ✓ Play games such as Monopoly, Guess Who, UNO, etc.
- ✓ Go swimming or sledding
- ✓ Go shopping
- ✓ Engage in a sporting activity
- ✓ Watch a favorite movie or television show together

Going to sleep and waking up can be very scary times for children placed in a new home. You may need to develop routines to help children go to sleep and wake up. It is important to give children permission to get up and use the bathroom, come and get you if needed, and to have access to nightlights and a clock to ensure security of space and time. Ask the child what helps them feel safe when they are scared at night. Try and accommodate their safety needs. Consider doing a daily review with the child at bedtime that amplifies their success and positive behaviors. As a part of the daily review, tell them how much you enjoy having them in your home.

Family Rules:

Children who have been mistreated and have experienced out-of-home care need limits and boundaries, just as all children do. All children need to know what is and is not allowed. The child will need to know that the rules in your home are consistent and predictable. Over time, knowing this helps children feel more secure. They will come to trust the home and the other family members. Remember, you, your family dynamics, routine, and house rules are all new to a child placed in your home, unless they have lived with you previously. You can help ease the adjustment by being consistent, keeping rules simple, and by offering age-appropriate explanations.

A family's "rules" are often informal and unspoken. A new person entering your family's world, however, needs to be oriented and helped to learn and practice these rules. Before the child enters your home, your family should sit down together to discuss what you feel is most important in your family. You should discuss the way you live together on a daily basis, and you should ask yourselves what a new person would need to know to become a part of your family.

There is a fine line between routines and rules, especially some of the routines that set the pattern for your informal rules. Informal rules may be things such as who sits where at the dinner table; not wearing shoes in the house; telling you if they use the last of something (toilet paper, toothpaste). Many children enter care without healthy boundaries. You may need to teach the child things such as respecting another person's personal property, closing the bathroom door, or not walking into someone else's bedroom without their permission. Other rules are important to help maintain health and safety. Be sure to explain the rules to the child.

Always remember that we learn through repetition. So, it is normal that new family rules will need to be repeated and re-explained. A positive, nonintrusive way to offer reminders on rules is to have them written for all to see, such as on a poster. Positively reinforce progress on rule compliance. Also, do not be threatened by a child comparing your family rules to the rules, or lack of rules, that they experienced in their own home. Their comparison is often their attempt to think through how rules work in different settings.

Discipline

No one enjoys discipline, but sometimes it is necessary. It is also important that discipline is administered correctly, especially for children who may be coming from unstable home situations. Abuse, neglect, and trauma can lead to a variety of emotional and behavioral issues, and how these issues are dealt with can impact whether the behaviors get better or worse. It is important that discipline is constructive or educational in nature and may include diversion, separation from problem situations, talking with the child about the situation, praise for appropriate behavior, and gentle physical restraints such as holding. Children shall not be subjected to physical harm or humiliation.

Below are some discipline guidelines taken from the foster care handbook:

1. No child may be kicked, bitten, punched, spanked, shaken, pinched, roughly handled, or struck with an inanimate object by any adult living in the home.
2. Authority to discipline may not be delegated to or be accomplished by children.
3. Separation, when used as discipline, must be brief and appropriate to the child's age and circumstances, and the young child must be within hearing of an adult in a safe, lighted, well-ventilated room. No child may be isolated in a locked room or closet.
4. No child may be physically disciplined for lapses in toilet training.
5. Verbal abuse or derogatory remarks about the child, the child's family, race, religion, or cultural background may not be used or permitted.
6. No child shall be force-fed unless medically prescribed and administered under a physician's care.
7. Deprivation of means, including food, clothing, shelter, hygiene, and medical care, may not be used as a form of discipline or punishment.

Below are some discipline techniques you may be able to implement with positive results:

1. Ignore mild misbehavior
 - a. A lot of a child's actions may stem from them wanting your attention or simply not knowing how to behave in a social setting. Remember the environment the child is coming from, and try not to get agitated over small things like a lack of table manners or a tendency to interrupt adult conversation.
2. Praise good behavior
 - a. Try to catch the child being good and emphasize the behavior you appreciate, even if it is as simple as the child picking up their socks. Praising the child's efforts will give incentive to continue appropriate behavior and help the child to understand what expectations you have of them.
3. Give the child options
 - a. Offering choices and changing the way you phrase things can make a big difference. Try to avoid using the word "no;" for example, instead of saying, "No TV until you finish your homework," try, "When you finish your homework, you can watch TV for an hour." Offering choices, such as, "Do you want to do your homework or take out the trash first?" or "Do you want green beans or peas with your chicken?" lets a child feel that they have some say in their life and may reduce resistance to completing certain tasks.
4. Redirect Attention
 - a. If the child is throwing a tantrum, ask them to help you with something, such as cooking dinner. Or if they are upset that they could not go to the park, remind them of something you are planning to do later in the week. A little redirection can help to avoid a lot of unnecessary power struggles.
5. Offer rewards for good behavior
 - a. A reward system can be a very effective tool for kids of all ages. Take the time to find out what motivates the child, as different children will respond better to one form of reward than they do to another. What is most important is that the child sees it as a reward system, and not as a punitive plan that will cause them to lose privileges.

6. Place the child in time out
 - a. Used effectively, a time out will get your child to engage in self-reflection about the choices that were made and the consequences that follow. It's a good idea to debrief with them afterwards and try to get some dialogue going about what can be done better next time. Some children may do well with a time-out chair, while others may do better with a time-out room. The amount of time spent in a time-out should be appropriate for age.
 - b. You can also try a "time-in," where you and the child sit and discuss their behaviors immediately but do this in another location away from distractions. Tell the child that their behavior was not okay and have them sit in an area nearby. Tell them you will be nearby and when they are ready to talk about what happened to tell you, "ready." When they are ready, ask the child what they did wrong and how they can do it right next time. Children need an adult's help to learn how to regulate. A "time-in" teaches the child "I'm here to help you and we're going to work on this together," rather than sending them away to deal with it on their own. Using Time In Instead of Time Out - YouTube

The I.D.E.A.L response to discipline: The IDEAL Response for Parents.wmv - YouTube

I – Immediate

- If you react within 3 seconds, the child will learn.

D – Direct

- Be within 3 feet of the child, and have your eyes and full body directed towards them.

E – Efficient

- Let your reaction to behavior match the level of response from the child; don't overreact to something small

A – Action-based

- "If you do the thing you heard about, you have a 'body memory' of it." Help to give the child a body memory for the right thing rather than the wrong thing.

L – Leveled at Behavior

- You want: the behavior changed or corrected, the child more connected to you than they were before, and the child to be content because they succeeded.

Whatever tools are used for discipline, the most important thing is consistency. None of the tools mentioned above will be effective if the child knows they can alter your decision if they push hard enough. When specific behavior problems arise, work with the child's guardian, case manager, therapist, and other caretakers to identify the best strategies for intervention.

Vital Information Binder

Create a binder or filing system that holds important information for the child. By creating this you will have all important information in one spot to ease your stress. It will also be a place where you can keep things that may be important to the child.

- Important phone numbers

- Notes from appointments (medical, school, etc.)
- A copy of their immunization record and other important medical information
- Report cards or other documents from school
- Any legal documentation
- A flash drive with photos you have taken of the child(ren) during their time with you
- Kids artwork – they may want to show off their work during parent visits or it may be something they may want when they get older

What to expect in meetings and visits

What to expect is never the same, but this may provide a basic understanding. If you have a caseworker, you can always ask them more questions about the meeting and visits and how to navigate them.

Meetings arranged by the child's case worker

If the child has a caseworker from a Human Service Zone office, you will have various required meetings. Generally, there are 2 main reoccurring meetings: the home visits and the Family Team Meeting. More frequent meetings are visitations with parents. The frequency of visitations varies, but the goal is generally 1-2 times a week minimum.

Home visit from a case worker occurs once a month. The primary reason for this visit is to ensure the child's safety and needs are being met as well as to assist you with questions and concerns you may have. Generally, the child needs to be present since the caseworker will want to talk with them to see how things are going. The home visits should not be a stressful time and generally last 30 minutes to a couple hours (length of time is based on amount of information needing to be discussed).

Family team meeting occurs every 90 days. This meeting includes far more people as it includes the key people in the child's life. The people invited are generally: Caseworker, foster parent(s)/kinship caregiver(s), child's parents, school social worker, counselor, etc.

Visitation with the parent Visitations may be required by the caseworker or something that you and the parent arrange. They may also be supervised or unsupervised and can be face to face, over the phone, or video chat.

If supervised face-to-face visits are required, you will most likely drop the child off at a preset location where someone will watch the visit between the child and parent to ensure no harm happens. Or you may be the person supervising. These visits may be one to three times a week and generally the same day and time each week. You should avoid scheduling anything during these visits. Yes, it could be a wonderful time to get things done and visit with friends BUT visits can get cancelled. If the parent shows up late or not at all a visit will be cancelled and you will need to take the child home.

If visitations do not need to be supervised there will be more unknowns like days, times, and length of visit. If possible, try to maintain a schedule so the child knows when visits will happen.

Reactions from the child before or after visitations will vary. You may see the child withdraw, have explosive behavior, become defiant, or have struggles with eating or sleeping. Try to remember the child may not know how to regulate or express their feelings. The behaviors may start a couple days before and last for a couple days after. You can help the child during this time by trying to talk with them and giving them various outlets for trying to express their emotions.

One way to understand the complexity of emotions a child experiences through visitation is to understand that visitation often activates a grief and loss process for the child. Most often the child emotionally wants to be with their parent(s) and connects with the parent while visiting. However, yet again, the child has to leave their parent(s) when the visit is complete. It is unrealistic to think that a child will not have an emotional and/or behavioral reaction to this complex process. It is important to work with a child therapist in order to develop a transition plan to and from visitation.

Visitation has many benefits:

- Increase the likelihood of reunification (if still the goal)
- Provide an opportunity for change
- Reassure the child of parent's well being
- Ease separation pain
- Potentially reduce the time the child is living away from their parent
- Maintain and strengthen family relationships
- Help the parent to stay current and involved in the child's development
- Help participants cope, grieve, and work on future relationship if no longer planning to reunify

(Wright, 2001)

Recommendations for visitation process

- Check your own feelings – how do you feel about the visit process? – grief & loss
- Clarify your role in the visit process
- Identify who you can communicate thoughts and concerns with
- Look for ways to help the youth transition to and from the visit
- Work to understand how your values differ from the parent's values
- Remember "blood is thick" the child may side with the parent
- Try to keep a positive relationship with the child's parent.

- before and after visit behaviors
- ways to prepare for visit
- supporting the child after visit
- how to help when the visit is canceled

Creating a Scrapbook

Kinship caregivers are encouraged to document special events, homework achievements, activities, birthday parties, etc. that occur during a child's time in your home. A scrapbook of the day-to-day activities and successes the child has is appropriate and helpful in highlighting the child's time when placed out of their home. Remember, the child may be with you a short time or longer but if they are reunified with their biological parents, it is helpful to share those

memorable moments via a scrapbook with their family; a photo of the child's first day of school, loss of their first tooth, science fair project, or prom photo.

The process of creating a Scrapbook can:

- Help a child understand events in his/her life
- Provide tangible links to the past which provide chronological continuity
- Provide a vehicle for the child to share his/her life history with others
- Increase a child's self-esteem by providing a record of the child's growth and development
- Help the child's birth family share in the time when they were living apart

Although it is best to start collecting information when the child first arrives, it is never too late to begin a scrapbook. Scrap books do not need to be fancy and there are many companies that will create a book for you if you send in your photos. More information on this can be found on page 35.

Chapter 3: Understanding Trauma & Child Development

Trauma Informed Care

The word "trauma" is used to describe experiences or situations that are emotionally painful and distressing, and that may overwhelm people's ability to cope, and can cause numerous emotions which may include, but is not limited to feeling powerless, anxious, angry, scared, unsafe, hypersensitive, depressed and hyperalert. The term complex trauma is often applied to children served in child welfare. Complex trauma involves chronic child maltreatment, including psychological maltreatment, neglect of basic human needs both physically and emotionally, physical and sexual abuse, and exposure to domestic violence.

Trauma-informed care is a shift in practice for organizations that incorporates a deep understanding of how trauma impacts children's development into all aspects of its organizational culture, practices, and policies. The hallmark of a trauma-informed organization is one that seeks to create living environments and programs that focus on helping children feel safe and empowered and developing an understanding of the impact of trauma on children's behavior.

Supporting children with complex trauma is a challenge that kinship families courageously face every day, and trauma-informed understanding is often at the root of their empathetic and creative responses. An example of being a trauma-informed kinship caregiver is asking yourself, "What has happened to this child?" versus "What is wrong with this child?"

Children exposed to complex trauma are often diagnosed with several mental health conditions (e.g., Attention Deficit Disorder, Reactive Attachment Disorder, and Bipolar Disorder) that unfortunately do not capture the full impact of early trauma exposure. These labels may lead to ineffective treatment planning if the role of trauma is not carefully considered. Look for local resources or trainings, online resources including The National Child Traumatic Stress Network and the Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration (SAMHSA), and other books or articles. Trauma training helps people understand what being "trauma-informed" means and how gaining this wealth of knowledge can assist in making the kinship placement more successful. Take advantage of exploring training options that will help you better connect with the child in your home.

ACEs (Adverse Childhood Experiences)

Many other traumatic experiences can impact health and wellbeing of a person. These experiences are called ACEs or Adverse Childhood Experiences. ACEs are linked to chronic health problems, mental illness, and substance use problems in adolescence and adulthood. ACEs can negatively impact education, job opportunities, and earning potential. However, helping a child work through their ACEs can help reduce the chances of the negative impacts later in life.

ACEs can have lasting, negative effects on health, wellbeing, and life opportunities. ACEs can increase risks of injury, sexually transmitted infections, maternal and child health problems (such as teen pregnancy, pregnancy complications, and fetal death), involvement in sex trafficking, and a wide range of chronic diseases and leading causes of death such as cancer, diabetes, heart disease, and suicide.

ACEs can also cause toxic stress (extended or prolonged stress), which can negatively affect children’s brain development, immune systems, and stress-response systems. These in turn can affect children’s attention, decision-making, and learning. Children who grow up with toxic stress may have difficulty forming healthy and stable relationships, have unstable work histories as adults, and struggle with finances, jobs, and depression.

Potentially traumatic events that occur in childhood, such as:

- Experiencing violence, abuse, or neglect
- Witnessing violence in the home or community
- Having a family member attempt or die by suicide

Or aspects of the child’s environment that can undermine their sense of safety, stability, and bonding, such as growing up in a household with:

- Substance use problems
- Mental health problems
- Instability due to parental separation or household members being in jail or prison

Of adults surveyed across 25 states, 61% reported experiencing at least one type of ACE before age 18. Nearly 1 in 6 reported experiencing four or more types of ACEs.

Creating and sustaining safe, stable, and nurturing relationships and environments can prevent ACEs and help children reach their full potential.

Understanding Behaviors and Emotions Connected to Trauma

It is very important that a child who has experienced trauma be involved with a mental health therapist who is trained in trauma-informed care. It is also important for the child's caregiver to be involved in the child's therapy as trauma-related behaviors and emotions can be confusing and overwhelming, which can negatively impact parenting.

Because trauma is so impacting, and because the traumatic experiences of children vary from child to child, their responses also vary. Some children may show externalizing behaviors such as defiance or anger outbursts. Other children may display internalizing behaviors such as withdrawal and emotional disengagement. It is important for caregivers to remember that all behavior has a purpose. Many trauma-related behaviors are developed as protective behaviors. So even though the behaviors may appear strange or maladaptive, they have on some level helped the child survive.

Trauma related behaviors and emotions are often triggered by conscious or unconscious experiences that remind the child of their need to protect themselves. Triggers can be experiences, smells, certain people, sounds, voice tones, physical touches, and other sensory experiences. A starting point for caregivers in understanding trauma triggers is to keep a diary of the child's behavior and look for patterns of why the child reacts in certain situations. The child may not be aware of their behaviors or unsure how to control them. If you get angry or judgmental about behaviors it will only make things worse.

Some Trauma Related Behaviors May Include:

FOOD CHALLENGES- Mental health professionals often note that children that have experienced food neglect may display a number of challenges with food. They might

- Hoard food
- Not be able to regulate their food intake so they overeat
- They may be picky eaters - unwilling to eat specific foods
- They may use food to self-soothe, as a distraction from their worries

As with other trauma-related behaviors, a mental health therapist can be very helpful in designing strategies that can be implemented in the home that reassure the child that they will be fed in a safe, nurturing manner.

Here are some possible interventions to discuss with the child's mental health therapist:

- Food baskets that allow the child to have access to food.
- A food package that they have in their school backpack that can travel with the child.
- An established time for snacks that involve caregiver nurturing.
- Teaching the child how their body feels when they are full and ways not to overeat.
- Structured, positive recognition to highlight the improvement on food issues.
- Help them slow down by helping them count how many times they chew. Create praise and rewards
- Let the child have a backpack or plastic tub of non-perishable food they can keep in their room.
- Create a shelf in the pantry or fridge with snacks they can have at any time without needing to ask.

SLEEP CHALLENGES- Sleep challenges are often connected to nighttime-triggered fears, possibly linked to abusive behavior experienced directly by the child or witnessed by the child.

Sleep challenges can include the:

- Inability to go to sleep
- nightmares
- wandering around room or home
- hiding in their sleeping area or other areas of the home
- restless sleep and startle waking

An important first step in assisting with sleep challenges is asking the child how they can feel safe in their sleeping area. Use the child's ideas to increase the safety in their sleeping area. Some ways to help the child feel safe are adjusting bedroom lighting, allowing the child to arrange their sleeping area in a manner that helps them feel safe, providing them with a flashlight, safety objects that help the child feel safe (such as a special blanket or stuffed animal), relaxing music, calming bedtime stories, showing the child that the windows are locked, and looking in areas of the room that the child fears such as under their bed or dark corners of a closet. Review these safety measures with the child's trauma-informed mental health therapist for additional input.

ANGER OUTBURSTS AND DEFIANCE CHALLENGES- Often, children with traumatic backgrounds struggle to understand and comply with rules (Blausein, et al., 2003). In addition to noncompliance, defiance can show itself through temper outbursts, arguing, and irritability. It is highly recommended that a child who is displaying anger outbursts and/or defiance be involved with a trauma-informed mental health therapist, not only for the child's benefit but also for the caregiver's benefit as parenting a defiant child can be exhausting. The child's therapist can also assist with assessing how anxiety is a factor as defiance and anxiety are closely interconnected.

Here are some strategies to try at home in responding to defiance and anger outbursts:

- As a caregiver, don't engage when the child is escalating unless the child is at risk to harm themselves or others; call a mutual time out for the child and caregiver.
- Most adults over-verbalize when they are anxious. When youth are angry, fewer words from adults is generally better. Speak in specifics when intervening, using a calm voice.
- Have pre-planned consequences for misbehavior. Do not implement the consequences until after the child has calmed
- Work with a trauma-informed therapist to learn self-calming skills. Practice the self-calming skills with the child
- Have available objects the child can use to expend angry energy when they are upset such as squeeze balls or bubble wrap
- Have an emotions chart – Let the child express on the chart how they feel
- Track the outburst – is it over food, bed time, toys? Does time of day matter? Maybe medication or hunger?
- Try saying something totally random to redirect the brain - "purple hippos ride bikes in the rain" While the child is trying to figure out what you said, try redirecting with an activity.
- Help the child learn to recognize their feelings and self sooth – saying random words like watermelon, strawberry, dog, sky, blue, while un-balling fist. Each word goes with a finger until their hand is open and happy rather than balled in a fist/tight and angry

CARING FOR A CHILD WHO HAS EXPERIENCED SEXUAL MISUSE- Unfortunately, there are a number of ways youth can be pre-maturely exposed to sexual activity. They may have been directly sexually exploited. They may have witnessed others involved in sexual activity or others being abused sexually. They may have been exposed to sexually explicit pornography and/or sexualized language. Any youth that displays sexualized behaviors (not appropriate to age/development) needs to be seen by a trauma-informed mental health therapist. A therapy referral is also necessary for youth that are known, or suspected, to have experienced sexual abuse.

It is also important that the caregiver receive education on the impact of sexual abuse on children. Here are some things for caregivers to consider in caring for a youth with sexualized behavior:

- Use correct terms when discussing body parts and body functions
- Have clear privacy boundaries in the home. Consider writing out the boundaries so that there is a visual reminder of the boundaries. Example: We close the bathroom door when bathing or toileting
- Respect and ask about the child's comfort level with supportive types of touch such as a good night high five or safe hug
- Learn about normal behaviors associated with sexual maturation

(Child Welfare Information Gateway, 2018)

(Nicole Slavik, n.d.)

SELF-HARM (CUTTING, PICKING AT SKIN, PULLING HAIR OUT, etc.) – The reasons youth may self-harm are numerous and can include managing overwhelming emotions of anxiety, to feel in control, to express unhappiness, and to feel something rather than numb. It is important that the youth who self-harms is seen by a mental health therapist and that the caregiver is involved in the therapeutic process in order to support the youth who self-harms. The mental health therapist can often help create a safety or coping plan with input from the youth and caregiver.

Some coping mechanisms that youth may use to counter the desire to self-harm include:

- Putting off self-harm by just five minutes, then six, then seven
- Keeping the items used to self-harm in a hard-to-open box so it takes time to get them out
- Keeping a stress ball to squeeze
- Keeping an elastic band on the wrist and pinging it hard
- Keeping a supply of pens and paper to write down feelings or draw
- Listening to favorite music, and perhaps dancing
- Going for a walk or a run
- Using a red pen to draw on the place you want to cut
- Writing words on your skin with a red marker pen
- Messaging or phoning a friend
- Drawing and cutting out a shape for every day you don't self-harm and making a collage with the shapes
- Learning a new skill, such as sewing, knitting, or juggling

(Anderson, 2020)

AGE REGRESSION OR BABYLIKE BEHAVIOR- Periodic age regression in behavior is a normal part of child development. However, an increase in age regressive behavior can also display itself after a child experiences a disruption in their life routine, a traumatic event or their family experiences disruption or increased stress.

Some common forms of regressive behavior include increased:

- toileting issues
- language regression or “baby talk”
- sleep problems
- clingy behavior
- increased moodiness

Always remember that when stressed, it is normal for children (and adults) to return to previous behavior that is self-soothing. Here are some ways that a caregiver can respond to regressive behavior:

- Look for the stressors that the child has experienced that could be triggers for the regressive behavior
- Look for the purpose of their behavior. Example: if the child has recently returned from a visit with their birth parent(s) and responds with increased moodiness, and is able to talk about the visit, set aside time to listen and comfort the child
- Engage the child in an enjoyable play activity
- Ask the child what they find soothing - support their efforts to self-soothe in a healthy way.
- Help the child put words to their emotions which helps the child express their stressors and helps the caregiver to respond
- Positively reinforce the child returning to their positive, previous behavior

WITHDRAWAL OR LACK OF INTEREST- If a child suddenly withdraws from activities they once found pleasurable, this change can be interpreted as a sign that the child is experiencing a change in mood, possibly depression and/or anxiety. Additional signs of depression with accompanying anxiety may include a change in eating habits, sleeping routine, tearfulness, and irritability. In this scenario, the child should be seen by a mental health therapist for assessment of depression and anxiety. In this type of withdrawal, the primary focus should remain on treating the mood challenges. Often the child will return to their previous, enjoyable activities once the mood challenges have been responded to.

If the child has a long-term pattern of not engaging in activities, the possibility of this being a mood challenge exists but it can also be a sign that the child has not been exposed to activities in the past. As a result, the child may be fearful of trying activities because of the neglect that they have experienced. In this scenario, caregivers can support the child’s involvement in activities by:

- Recognizing what skills the child has displayed and then focusing positive attention on that particular skill. As an example - if the child enjoys drawing, draw with the child and eventually explore the options with the child of where they might be able to further their drawings skills
- As a caregiver, talk about your own fears in engaging in activities in a way that normalizes fears
- Encourage the child to invite a peer to the home where they can engage in the activity together

- Within reasonable boundaries, make adults aware of the child's fears in pursuing an activity. Example: If a child wants to play baseball, make the coach aware that the child has not played baseball previously and is worried about how they might do and might be viewed by their peers.
- If a child shows interest in an activity, practice that activity with the child
- Always remember that we all have varying needs and levels of comfort in social engagement. Some of us want to be active in a variety of activities that have a high level of people contact. Others prefer more solitary forms of activities

OBSESSIVE COMPULSIVE BEHAVIORS – Obsessive Compulsive Disorder (OCD) is characterized by repetitive thoughts, emotions and behaviors that the person with OCD feels they have no control over. Examples can include fear of germs associated with repetitive hand washing, organizing/strict order, thinking harmful or taboo thoughts. Advancements in the study of neuroscience have enhanced the understanding of OCD and it is considered a neuropsychiatric disorder. Children displaying OCD challenges should be assessed by a mental health provider and the assessment should include psychiatric assessment.

Here are some ways caregivers can support a child with OCD:

- Have patience
- Learn as much as you can about OCD and the specific symptoms displayed by the child you are caring for
- Be consistent in expectations
- Study and learn if there are triggers that cause the OCD to escalate
- Try not to accommodate or enable the OCD behaviors and thoughts
- Support the child's efforts to manage their OCD behaviors and thoughts

Remember that all people have different needs for organization and have unique fears. However, what differentiates OCD behaviors and thoughts from normal is that OCD interferes with the child's functioning and causes significant distress for the child.

ANXIETY – Anxiety is an emotional process that includes excessive worry, apprehension, nervousness, or preoccupation on a specific worry. Often the anxiety is centered on events that a child has little control over. There is often a physical component to anxiety which can include sleep challenges, headaches, stomach upset, heartrate increases, rapid breathing, sweating, and often feeling tired. A mental health therapist can also offer assistance with responding to children's anxiety.

So what can a caregiver do to help a child manage their anxiety?

- Help by creating a schedule and routine so the child can process what will be happening
- Amplify their strengths, give examples of how they have handled difficult situations in the past
- Teach skills on calming the mind and body such as deep, slow, breathing
- Brainstorm coping mechanisms with the child that they can use when they are anxious

- Share with the child how you, the caregiver, cope with anxiety
- Do not react negatively to the child's anxiety
- Research children's books that teach skills on coping with anxiety; many resources are available

SLEEP STRUGGLES (NIGHTMARES, INSOMNIA, WALKING) – Sleep challenges are often associated with anxiety which can become amplified at night. As a result, a caregiver's efforts should focus on helping the child become calm at night. For youth that have been traumatized at night, caregiver efforts should focus on helping the child feel safe at night.

Here are some suggestions on how to help children calm down and feel safe at night:

- Create a routine around bedtime that helps them feel safe. Check under the bed, in the closet, and in drawers to assure the child that they are safe
- Sing softly and/or pray with them
- Read bedtime stories with the child that are comforting and soothing
- Get them a nightlight and check at night when it is on to see if it has any scary shadow placements
- Put on soft instrumental music
- Speak to the child's physician about natural sleep aids like melatonin.
- Ask the child about their fears at night
- Ask the child about how they would like their sleeping area arranged to feel safe at night
- Use weighted blankets

Resources for helping a child with trauma

There are several resources, books, and theories on helping children with trauma. The key to remember is that it may take months before you can determine if a method is helping the child.

There are different types of trauma and every child reacts differently to trauma regardless of what they experienced.

Resilience

<https://www.apa.org/topics/resilience>

<https://developingchild.harvard.edu/science/key-concepts/resilience/>

Resilience is the process and outcome of successfully adapting to difficult or challenging life experiences, especially through mental, emotional, and behavioral flexibility and adjustment to external and internal demands. Resilience can be built, but it does not mean we will not still experience emotional pain, sadness, and anxiety.

Some children develop resilience, while others do not. Supportive relationships, adaptive skill-building, and positive experiences is the foundation of resilience; the most common factor for children who develop resilience is at least one stable and committed relationship with a supportive parent, caregiver, or other adult.

Children who do well while experiencing serious hardship typically have a biological resistance to adversity and strong relationships with the important adults in their family and community. The interaction between biology and environment builds a child's ability to cope with adversity and overcome threats to healthy development.

Factors that predispose children to positive outcomes are:

1. Facilitating supportive adult-child relationships
2. Building a sense of self-efficacy and perceived control
3. Providing opportunities to strengthen adaptive skills and self-regulatory capabilities
4. Mobilizing sources of faith, hope, and cultural traditions

Experiencing manageable or "positive" stress can be growth-promoting and help to develop resilience. The brain and other biological systems are most adaptable early in life, but age-appropriate, health-promoting activities can significantly improve the odds of an individual recovering from stress-inducing experiences at any age. Physical exercise, stress-reduction practices, and programs that actively build executive function and self-regulation skills can improve the abilities of children and adults to cope with, adapt to, and even prevent adversity. Furthermore, by strengthening these skills in yourself, you can model healthy behaviors for your children as well.

10 tips for building resilience in children and teens:

1. Make connections
 - a. Engaging and connecting with peers and family provides social support and strengthens resilience.
2. Help your child by having them help others
 - a. Helping others can help a child who feels helpless to feel empowered. This can look like age-appropriate volunteer work, asking them to help you with tasks that they can master, or talking to them about how they can help others in their class or grades below.
3. Maintain a daily routine
 - a. Sticking to a routine can be comforting to children, especially younger children who crave structure.
4. Take a break
 - a. Teach your child how to focus on something they can control or act on. Challenge unrealistic thinking by asking them to examine the chances of the worst-case scenario and what they might tell a friend who has those worries. Be aware of what troubling things your child may be exposed to, such as on the news, online, or in conversations they overheard.
5. Teach your child self-care
 - a. Caring for oneself and having fun will help children stay balanced and deal with stressful times better.

6. Move toward your goals
 - a. Establishing goals will help children focus on a specific task and can help build the resilience to move forward in the face of challenges.
7. Nurture a positive self-view
 - a. Remind your child of how they have successfully handled hardships in the past and help them to understand that these past challenges help to build the strength to handle future challenges. Help your child learn to trust themselves to solve problems and make appropriate decisions.
8. Keep things in perspective and maintain a hopeful outlook
 - a. Even when facing very painful events, help your child look at the situation in a broader context and keep a long-term perspective. Help them to see that there is a future beyond the current situation and that the future can be good. Being optimistic and having a positive outlook can enable children to see good things in life and keep going even in hard times. You can use history to show that life moves forward after bad events, and the worst things are specific and temporary.
9. Look for opportunities for self-discovery
 - a. Tough times are often when children learn the most about themselves. Help them to reflect on how what they are facing can teach them "what am I made of."
10. Accept change
 - a. Help your child to see that change is part of life and new goals can replace goals that have become unattainable. Examine what is going well and have a plan of action for what is not going well.

Attachment

Attachment is an important dynamic in the healthy psychological development of a child. Healthy attachment is marked by the child having the opportunity to attach to caregiver(s) that are consistent, nurturing, provide safety and respond to the basic needs of a child. Providing these qualities by the caregiver is essential for healthy attachment. When there is a healthy attachment, a child learns to trust others, learns how to respond emotionally and how others will respond emotionally to them. (Bowlby, 1982) The study of neurodevelopment identifies that secure attachment is particularly related to the development of the frontal cortex, which is responsible for decision making, judgement and reasoning. (De Bellis, 2003) (Dozier, Peloso, Lewis, Laurenceau, & Levine, 2008)

How can caregiver(s) reinforce positive attachment?

- Learn about attachment
- Involve yourself, and the child you are caring for, with a mental health therapist that is trained in attachment
- Nurture the child – use language that is positive and affirming. Consult with the child's therapist on appropriate physical nurturing
- Have specific, predictable structure and expectations
- Show the child that you listen to them

- After times of conflict, quickly reaffirm to the child that you care about them
- Be patient. Children with attachment challenges often have difficulty generalizing behavior and emotions from day to day

With proper attachment children are less likely to be classified as developmentally delayed, less likely to need medication, and have fewer behavior problems.

Events in the Child's Life

Certain events can have a powerful impact, resulting in changes in behavior or conduct, sleeping and eating patterns, and temperament. Dealing with issues that often arise around these events may require additional contact and support from biological family or caseworkers. You may wish to reach out to a counselor to help the child navigate their feelings during these events, as well as notifying the child's teacher about the event and new behaviors you have seen. Ask the teacher to share with you any changes they may have noticed.

You should also consider creating a life book with the child that notes these events through pictures, the child's papers, artwork, notes etc. (Suggested on page 22)

Examples of Important Life Events:

- First day of school
- Birthdays, holidays, Mother's Day, Father's Day, Grandparent's Day
- Visits with parents, siblings, or other family members
- Meetings with school staff, medical staff, or police officers
- Court hearings
- Anniversaries of significant events

Birth to 18 months

During this period of profound growth and development, babies grow and change rapidly. Doctors recommend that you speak to your baby a lot during this phase, because hearing your voice will help your baby to develop communication skills. Other suggestions include:

- Short periods of tummy time to help strengthen your baby's neck and back muscles — but make sure baby is awake and you're close by for this playtime.
- Respond right away when your baby cries. Picking up and comforting a crying baby builds strong bonds between the two of you.

18 Months to 2 years

During the toddler years, children continue to need lots of sleep, good nutrition, and close, loving relationships with parents and caregivers.

Doctors at Seattle Children’s Hospital offer this advice for creating a safe, nurturing space to maximize your child’s early growth and development:

- Create predictable routines and rituals to keep your child feeling secure and grounded.
- Toddler-proof your home and yard so kids can explore safely.
- Use gentle discipline to guide and teach children. Avoid hitting, which can cause long-term physical and emotional harm.
- Sing, talk, and read to your toddler to boost their vocabularies.
- Watch your child for cues about the warmth and reliability of all caregivers.
- Take good care of yourself physically and emotionally because your child needs you to be healthy.

3 to 5 years old

During these pre-school years, children grow more and more independent and capable. Their natural curiosity is likely to be stimulated because their world is expanding: new friends, new experiences, new environments like daycare or kindergarten.

During this time of growth, the CDC Trusted Source recommends that you:

- Keep reading to your child daily.
- Show them how to do simple chores at home.
- Be clear and consistent with your expectations, explaining what behaviors you want from your child.
- Speak to your child in age-appropriate language.
- Help your child problem solve when emotions are running high.
- Supervise your child in outdoor play spaces, especially around water & play equipment.
- Allow your child to have choices about how to interact with family members & strangers.

School-age development

During the school years, children gain independence and competence quickly. Friends become more important and influential. A child's self-confidence will be affected by the academic and social challenges presented in the school environment.

As kids mature, the parenting challenge is to find a balance between keeping them safe, enforcing rules, maintaining family connections, allowing them to make some decisions, and encouraging them to accept increasing responsibility.

Despite their rapid growth and development, they still need parents and caregivers to set limits and encourage healthy habits.

Here are some things you can do to ensure that your child continues to be healthy:

- Make sure they get enough sleep.
- Provide opportunities for regular exercise and individual or team sports.
- Create quiet, positive spaces for reading and studying at home.
- Limit screen time and monitor online activities carefully.
- Build and maintain positive family traditions.
- Talk to your children about consent and setting boundaries with their bodies.

Chapter 4: Communications & Connections

Confidentiality

The children are going through a transition and do not need everyone knowing their business. Smaller communities are difficult because word spreads quickly. Other parents may say something in front of their kids and soon those kids will be making comments to the kinship children about their situation, and this can create further problems.

If you need to speak with someone about the situation, try to do so in a limited capacity. Tell only the people who need to know and limit the detail to only what is needed. You can easily tell people the children will be staying with you for some time and nothing more.

If the child you are caring for has a legal custodian through a tribe, Human Service Zone (former county social services), state agency, or juvenile services entity, ask the custodial agency (tribe, social services, etc.) about the legal requirements on confidentiality.

Ways to communicate

Communication is essential. You need to communicate with the child, family members, school, medical professionals, caseworkers, and so many more. How and what you communicate is the key. Regardless of who you are speaking with you need to avoid making negative comments about the children's parents. It will get back to the children and can hurt your relationship with them. You will need to express your frustrations but do so to a limited number of people and pay attention to what and how you say things.

Communicating with children

When communicating with the children about the situation try to speak to them at their developmental/age level and again avoid negative comments. The child may begin to see you as the enemy and want to protect their parent if you are negative regarding their parents. They may also not be able to come to grips with the situation and see their parent as innocent, which makes them see you as a liar when you say something about their parent (even if it is true). You need to pay attention to how the child is communicating with you and what they are saying.

After communicating with a child on important topics, ask the child to repeat back to you what they understood from the conversation. This gives the caregiver the opportunity to clarify misunderstandings which often lead to conflict.

Birth parent and other family

When communicating with the parent(s) try to stay positive and encouraging, especially if they are trying to make the changes needed for reunification. Try and update birth parents on the child's life, such as school and activities they might be involved in. Often birth parents are hurt and angry that their children are not with them, and they displace their anger onto caregivers.

Unfortunately, there are people who will pick sides and get mad at you. They may blame you for the child being out of the home, accuse you of kidnapping the child, or just yell at you for "messing" things up. The best thing to do in these situations is to stay calm. If people are being difficult, you can calmly tell them that you are trying to help the family and keep the child safe.

Sometimes it is also best to document all communications and if people turn hostile try to record the conversation, especially if they are making threats. It may seem extreme but there are circumstances when it can help protect you and the children.

Medical or school professionals

When a child enters your care, it is always important to have the child medically evaluated. If you contact the physician's medical staff prior to the child's appointment, they can generally provide you with a questionnaire or outline of what information is important for them to receive. It is good to track information like sleep patterns, behaviors and when they occur, eating patterns, exposure to drugs or alcohol, forms of abuse, prenatal information, etc. Doctors will need to know forms of abuse the child has experienced, but they generally do not need to hear the whole story of everything that happened, just key details.

Mental health professionals will need to know as much as possible regarding the child's history of health, development, maltreatment they may have experienced, important relationships to the child, school performance, and if you have knowledge of pregnancy exposure due to maternal alcohol or drug abuse. Often, mental health professionals will also have an outline or questionnaire that identifies what information is important for you to provide to them.

Discuss with the child if and how he/she wants to explain to others why he/she is not living with his/her birth parents. Some ways of doing this might be that his/her own parents have some "big people" problems that they are working on. Another explanation might be that his/her family has a lot of family members that care about each other which is why he/she is living with other family members. Some cultures have a normalized value on kinship care which can also be explained as a reason.

Conflict Resolution

- Teaching Kids How to Deal With Conflict
<https://childmind.org/article/teaching-kids-how-to-deal-with-conflict/>
 - Visual feelings chart
 - Kids can point to the image that best represents their emotions
 - Stop light or emotion thermometer
 - To gauge where they are
 - Brainstorm solutions on how to handle different types of conflict

- Get perspective
 - Have the child think about what their behaviors mean in the long run
 - Have them think about what it may be like for the other person
 - Ask the child was something else happening and before they struggled with the conflict. I.E. nervous about family visit
- Work on communication
 - Write out their emotions with various activities
 - Role play ways they can talk things through
- Be the model they need
 - Make sure you are showing the kids proper behaviors and ways to handle conflict
- How to Teach Kids Conflict Resolution Skills, <https://www.counselorkeri.com/2019/03/04/teach-kids-conflict-resolution/>
 - Teach them how to calm themselves
 - Help them work on understanding feelings and filtering thoughts
 - What is the scale of the problem
 - Is this a small, medium, large, gigantic problem
 - Teach how to find other solutions to problems
 - Help them understand how they can move past it

Family Communication

Communication Skills for your Family,

<https://www.udel.edu/academics/colleges/canr/cooperative-extension/fact-sheets/comunications-skills-your-family/>

- Teach active listening
 - Pay attention to body language
 - Reduce distractions – put the phone down, turn tv, music off
 - Repeat to the person “This is what I understood you say...”
 - Don’t always offer advice, sometime people just need to be heard
 - Do not interrupt
- Do not name call
- Avoid terms like “you never” or “I always”
- Try to brainstorm possible win/win solutions – may not always work but helps reduce conflict
- Document the problems and possible solutions with timelines if people want a deadline for certain changes

Miscellaneous other tips on Communication Methods

- Have them repeat what you want
 - You ask them to put away clothes make sure they have listened and can say what you want them to do.
- Remove distraction

- If on the computer, phone, tv, reading a book, etc they are focused on something else. Ask them to pause and focus on the conversation
- Simplify what you are saying
 - They are children they may not understand everything you are saying
- Listen to them
 - Maybe they need to share why they struggling with a task
- Look for other causes for struggling to listen or communicate
 - If struggling to sleep did they have too much sugar, are they focused on tv, is there a medical issue?

Help the child maintain connections (friends, family, community)

If possible, help the child maintain connections with their friends, other family, and various connections. The child needs to maintain a level of normalcy. If they were attending a youth group see if it is possible for them to still attend. If they want to have a sleepover see what you can do to make it happen. Try to set up play dates with their friends. If travel is needed maybe try to arrange several get togethers for them and make a weekend of it. Sometimes it will not be possible to maintain the connection in a face-to-face way, but you can arrange phone calls or video chats. Maybe encourage the child to write letters or emails. There are also various types of social media platforms in which the child can keep in contact with people. However, you should be aware of who they are speaking with and what social media platform they are using. Please be sure to look into internet and social media safety (see information starting on page 52).

Chapter 5: Daily life

Importance of creating a routine

Most children do better when they know what to expect as it adds predictability, maximizes their opportunity for success and is a proactive step in avoiding misunderstanding that can result in conflict. Routines also help children who have ADHD, PTSD, and Anxiety for the reasons previously mentioned. Creating a routine is a necessity but does not need to be extensive.

Caregivers can get a large desk calendar or a white board and write down events for the children. Events like if they have a visit with their parent, a doctors appointment, gymnastics, youth group, or a play date. It is good to list the appointments as well as the fun times. Some children will need more structure and in-depth information such as what they do each hour.

Routines also encompass when the child wakes up and goes to bed, when they take baths/showers, brush teeth, work on homework, etc. Remember that children that have experienced maltreatment and/or neglect have often experienced chronic chaos. As a result, the ability to remember and abide to routines is a task they'll need to learn. As with all new skills, it may take time and repetition.

Social and Recreational Activities

It is important for children to participate in recreational, school, religious, and community activities. Participating in activities can help children and adolescents develop skills, build self-esteem, and gain a sense of achievement. You are encouraged to give your kinship child opportunities to participate in groups such as Scouts, 4-H, church or synagogue (of their choice), activities related to cultural education, and sports and to take lessons in their areas of interest (music, dance, art, swimming, etc.).

It is essential that a child's activities take place within a safe environment. This requires common sense and good judgment on your part plus a full appreciation of your responsibility, a concern for the protection of children in your care, and commitment to maintaining high standards of safety. Kinship caregivers should be sound adult role models and teach good safety habits; lead by example. The following guidelines should help you ensure a safe environment for children:

- Know your children, who they are with, and what they are doing
- Know the nature of the activity and the setting where the activity is taking place
- Be sure the child is dressed properly for the activity and the climate
- Plan ahead by anticipating situations and behaviors, thereby reducing risks and hazards
- A particular child may have a health or physical problem that requires special attention and supervision. For example, a child with a history of seizure disorder or allergic reactions would require additional planning and preparations
- Protection from sunburn
- Awareness and monitoring of specific health problems; it is crucial for you to discuss desired activities with the child's doctor and to be knowledgeable in treating the concern

For possible ways your kinship child can get involved check out your local library, boy scout/girl scout, summer day camps, youth groups/Awanas, gymnastics, and athletic teams.

Dating

Dating is a normal part of adolescence and important for development and social adjustment. As the kinship parent, you can help guide the teen in your care so that dating remains appropriate and offers personal growth. You are responsible for setting rules and establishing healthy relationships. You can also role model appropriate boundaries and should communicate with youth to identify and establish dating rules, curfew, and trust.

- Teens who date often experience rejection. Be sensitive, listen to their concerns, and assist them in identifying ways to meet new friends.
- Help teens establish personal boundaries by encouraging them to respect their values and their bodies. Discuss sexual responsibility, consequences of sexual behavior, and if needed ask case managers to assist in conversations about responsible relationships.
- If a teen chooses to date, reasonable and prudent parenting would suggest kinship caregivers:
 - Obtain knowledge of who they are choosing to date
 - Suggest safe dating options, such as double dating in a public setting
 - Confirm transportation and who will be driving
 - Confirm curfew time
 - Confirm the plans for the evening
 - Confirm if others will be joining the couple
 - Confirm if plans change; the rule is to call BEFORE going/doing something other than what was planned
 - Exchange phone numbers

- Confirm a code word with the child/youth: If things become uncomfortable, the child must know they can CALL YOU no matter what! Example: "I forgot to feed the dog." That would be a very good code for a family who does not have a dog. A safe way for a child to tell you they would like you to come and pick them up, etc.
- If the youth has a trauma background, it is recommended that dating be processed with the youth's therapist so that the youth and the caregiver have an understanding of trauma's impact on dating relationships.

Socializing/ Hanging out with Friends

Children may be invited to a birthday party, asked to go on a play date, or invited to a friend's house after school or after a football game on Friday night. Interacting and socializing with peers is normal and should be encouraged, so long as you find the peers/friends to be appropriate influences and a safe choice for the kinship child. Reasonable and prudent parenting would suggest kinship caregivers:

- Obtain knowledge of who is inviting the child to a birthday party, parents of the child, etc.
- Suggest hanging out with friends at your house where you know supervision is available, or in a public setting
- Confirm transportation and who will be driving
- Confirm drop off/pick up times
- Confirm the plans for the play date, birthday party, evening event, etc.
- Confirm if others will be there
- Confirm if plans change to call BEFORE doing something other than what was planned
- Confirm a code word with the child/youth: If things become uncomfortable, the child must know they can CALL YOU no matter what. Ex: "I forgot to feed the dog." That would be a very good code for a family who does not have a dog. A safe way for a child to tell you they would like you to come and pick them up, etc.
- Exchange phone numbers with the other family, friends, etc.

Chores and Household Responsibility

Performing chores that help maintain household order or satisfy a family need will help children feel useful and learn how to be responsible. Giving chores to children, however, should be done in a thoughtful way and in accordance with the following guidelines:

- Arrange for the child to feel successful in the early stages of the task or chore that he or she is given.
- Start with simple chores and tasks and work up to those that are more complex, dependent on the child's skills and abilities.
- Design the chore or activity according to the child's level of development.
- Rotate chores so that the child can develop different skills and have a variety of experiences.
- Chores or work should not be associated with discipline or punishment. Rather, they should be seen as part of the child's participation in family life.

- A prolonged amount of time should not be required for any chore. The time that chores are to be performed should not interfere with family activities, school, regular play time, visits to family, or the child's normal contacts.
- Praise the child for a job well done. Praise will help instill a sense of pride in achievement and a feeling of self-confidence.
- Encourage children to take care of their own personal belongings, make their bed, and keep their closet, drawers, toys, and other items in order.
- Different cultures have different values on sharing and ownership. Learn about and respect those values.

Remember children are still learning and not perfect. Do not expect perfection from the child with their chores. If you want tasks done a certain way help the child while they are doing it and remember to teach, not criticize.

Allowance

Giving a child an allowance is helpful in teaching the use of money. The amount of allowance given to a kinship child should be the same as the allowance given to any child in the home and follow the same rules and guidelines. It is suggested that your kinship children be allowed to spend at least a portion of their allowance as they wish since this helps promote independence, responsible decision-making, and budgeting.

The amount of allowance for children can vary based on your desires. Some make it tied to age.

Another factor to consider with an allowance is how it will be given out. Will it be a lump sum weekly/monthly? Do they need to earn it with chores? Or will it be a blending of a lump sum and earning additional with chores?

Savings Account

A savings account is an appropriate way for a young child to gain skill in both banking and responsibility. The account belongs only to the youth. As such, it should always be in the youth's legal name. Teaching healthy financial skills is something that can benefit the child as they grow into adulthood.

Social Media and Technology

Youth are surrounded by technology in various forms. Social media and use of technology will assist youth in socializing and maintaining connections but must be done in an appropriate way. Monitoring online activity and cell phone use (texting, Snapchat, Facebook, Instagram, tiktok, etc.) can assist youth in learning appropriate technology boundaries and internet safety. Set rules about the use of technology that meet the household structure (Ex: All cell phones are turned in at 9:00pm, no cell phones at the dinner table, cell phone passwords are shared with the kinship caregiver, Facebook users must "friend" you so monitoring of the posts can occur, etc.). You may want to determine if you should create and implement a media/technology contract. A contract would offer the youth an easy-to-follow list of expectations, which can decrease the opportunity for miscommunication.

Tips to help teens socialize in a fun and safe manner:

Be kind online: Treat people the way you would want to be treated. If your “friends” or “followers” are rude, do not react or retaliate. If needed, ask for help or use privacy tools to block peers who are inappropriate.

Think about what you post. Sharing inappropriate photos or intimate details online can cause problems. It is important to remember that people you consider friends can use this info against you at a later date. In addition, items that you tweet, post on Facebook, search online, snapchat, etc. can follow you. Posts today could affect future employment; many employers search the internet to find out information about a potential employee.

Parental controls for various accounts

Most devices and web browsers should have the option of implementing parental controls. With these settings, you can block certain sites, set limits for screen time and data usage, restrict certain apps, prevent unwanted spending, and block certain unwanted content. The process for implementing these controls will differ based on the device and its operating system. You can search online for directions or email Kinship@nd.gov and ask for a list of directions for various devices.

Chapter 6: Education

Kinship caregivers are expected to actively participate in the child's education. Helping the child with homework and school projects, attending teachers' conferences, joining a parent/school organization, and participating in field trips are some of the important ways that you can get involved. You should also discuss the child's educational progress with the child's parents and, if appropriate, encourage them to attend school meetings and events.

Proximity to School or Origin: While children are in your home, they may be registered in your local school or remain in their current school. The best interests of the child should be considered when determining which school he/she should attend. You may decide it is best to have the child remain at their familiar school. However, there are times when a child is too far away from their school of origin, making it impossible to continue attending.

When a child moves/relocates, be sure to notify school personnel of the child's placement.

The U.S. Department of Education offers a parent site that has a wide range of helpful information for parents and caregivers regarding children's education from early childhood through college, special needs, disabilities, language challenges, and gifted students.

Education Enrollment

Relative caregivers can contact their local school district's administrative office or their local school to find out how to register the child and what paperwork is needed. Caregivers may need birth records, health records, or previous school records. Some states have laws that allow relative caregivers to enroll children they are raising in school. These laws are often called "education consent" laws, but may be called something else in your state.

If you do not have the legal forms you should talk to the school about the McKinney Vento act; this is for a child at risk of homelessness, but your situation may apply.

Educational Support:

It is important that all interested parties be aware of the school achievement and special needs of your kinship child. It is important that you:

- Involve yourself in the child's school progress and activities; this shows the child that you are interested and that you care.
- If possible, inform the child's parents of school progress.
- Attend meetings held by the school in order to support the child with his or her educational needs.

Early Intervention, Special Education, and Related Services

The Federal Individuals with Disabilities Act (IDEA)

- From birth to age 21, children who have learning disabilities, physical disabilities, or other special needs may be able to get special early intervention, preschool, and special education services in school through the federal IDEA. Services may include speech, physical, and occupational therapies.

Child Find

- A part of IDEA that requires states to identify, locate, and evaluate children in areas of cognitive and physical functioning, hearing and vision, speech and language, and social and emotional development as early as possible. Once a Child Find evaluation team, which includes a child's caregivers, has decided if a child is eligible for early intervention or preschool special education services, an Individual Family Service Plan (IFSP, birth to 3 years of age) or an Individual Education Plan (IEP, 3-5 years of age) is developed and services begin shortly at no cost.

IEP (Individualized Education Program)

<https://www.understood.org/en/articles/what-is-an-iep>

An IEP is specialized support for children in PreK-grade 12 in public education. It lays out the special education instruction, supports, and services a student needs to thrive in school. It may also be called an Individualized Education Plan.

An IEP maps out the program of special education instruction, supports, and services kids need to make progress and thrive in school. IEPs are covered by special education law, or the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA), which requires public schools to provide special education and related services to eligible students. Having an IEP also gives students, families, and schools legal protections; it allows families to be involved in decisions that impact their child’s education and gives students rights when it comes to school discipline.

To get an IEP, there is an evaluation that shows a student’s strengths and challenges. The results of this evaluation are used to create a program of services and supports tailored to meet the student’s needs. You can ask to have your child evaluated by the school (which is free) or you can pay for a private evaluation; at times, the school may suggest to you that the child be evaluated, but the school cannot complete an evaluation without your consent.

To be eligible for an IEP, a student must have one or more of the 13 conditions that are covered under IDEA and be adversely affected by that disability, to the degree that they need services and accommodations to succeed at school.

Below are the 13 conditions covered under IDEA:

1. Specific learning disability (SLD)
 - Such as dyslexia, dyscalculia, or written expression disorder (dysgraphia)
2. Other health impairment

- Those limiting a child's strength, energy, or alertness
- 3. Autism Spectrum Disorder (ASD)
- 4. Emotional Disturbance
 - Such as anxiety, schizophrenia, bipolar disorder, obsessive-compulsive disorder, or depression
- 5. Speech or language impairment
- 6. Visual impairment, including blindness
 - Use of corrective eyewear does not qualify
- 7. Deafness
- 8. Hearing impairment
- 9. Deaf-blindness
- 10. Orthopedic impairment
 - The child lacks function or ability in their bodies (such as cerebral palsy)
- 11. Intellectual disability
- 12. Traumatic brain injury
- 13. Multiple disabilities
 - The child has more than one condition covered by IDEA

It is possible that the school will determine your child is not eligible for an IEP. In this case, you can request a 504 plan or get an Independent Educational Evaluation (IEE).

- 504 plan
 - This is a blueprint for how the school will support a student with a disability and remove barriers to learning.
 - 504 plans are not part of special education and are covered by different laws.
 - May give extended time on tests or the ability to leave the classroom for short breaks.
 - May also include changes to environment (such as a quiet space for test-taking), changes to instruction (such as checking in frequently on key concepts), or changes to how curriculum is presented (such as getting outlines of lessons)
- IEE - Independent Educational Evaluation
 - You have the right to request an IEE under IDEA if you disagree with the results of the school's evaluation
 - Usually you will have to pay for the evaluation on your own, but there are instances where the school may pay
 - An IEE has to meet the same standards that are required of a school evaluation
 - If the school feels that an IEE is not needed, it must ask for a due process hearing to explain why its evaluation is correct

Head Start:

Head Start and Early Head Start is a comprehensive child development program serving children from birth to age five, with the goal of increasing the cognitive, social, and emotional development of children, and to improve the chances of success when enrolled in school. Every Head Start program provides comprehensive services for children and families.

Infants, toddlers, and expectant families are served through Early Head Start programs. Early Head Start programs are available to the family until the child turns 3 years old and is ready to transition into a Head Start program or another pre-K program.

Head Start programs promote the school readiness of children ages 3 to 5.

Services may include:

- Early education in and out of the home
- Home visits, particularly for families with newborns and infants
- Parent education, including parent-child activities
- Comprehensive health and mental health services, including services to women before, during, and after pregnancy
- Nutrition
- Ongoing support for parents through case management and peer support groups

Requirements for eligibility include:

- Family must meet low-income guidelines
 - At or below the 100% federal poverty guideline
- Children in foster care, homeless children, and those in families receiving public assistance (such as TANF or SSI) are eligible regardless of income
- Families experiencing homelessness

If you have questions or need additional information on the Early Head Start and Head Start programs you can speak with your Kinship Navigator, caseworker, or contact your local program.

Or you can visit the following sites:

After-school programs

Some schools or school districts have after-school programs where the kids go from school to the after-school program until the evening hours. The activities in after-school programs vary. Generally, they have snacks, time to work on homework, and various indoor or outside activities. Contact your schools or district to see if they offer an after-school program.

Chapter 7: Safety and Emergency

Safety

You need to create a safety plan and review and practice it with the children. Include in your plan:

- Where to meet if there is a fire
 - for example, you could meet at the mailbox or a tree in the yard
- Where are fire extinguishers located
- Who to call in case of emergency
 - 911

Stranger safety

Create a code word that the child can remember. This way if you have someone coming to pick up the child, they will know it is safe.

Fire Safety

The Children & Family Services Training Center (CFSTC) and North Dakota Department of Human Services (NDDHS) have online fire safety training available. Click the link below and look under Training Options. CFSTC: <https://und.edu/cfstc/foster-parent-education/fire-safety-training.html>

The home should be equipped with fire extinguishers, smoke detectors, and carbon monoxide detectors as recommended by the local fire inspector or state fire marshal. They must always be in working condition.

Car Safety Restraint

ND state law, NDCC §39-21-41.2, requires the use of child restraints/safety belts. In summary:

- All children riding in a motor vehicle are required to be properly restrained in an infant car seat, convertible rear facing car seat, convertible forward facing car seat, booster seat, or a car seat belt (depending on the age and size of the child).
- The child restraint must be used correctly and be properly installed.
- The law applies to all seating positions, both front seat and back seat.
- Young children should not ride in the front seat because, in the event of a crash, the air bags are more likely to harm than to help.
- The driver is responsible for ensuring that all occupants are buckled in appropriate restraint.

For more information go online to ND Department of Health – Child Passenger Safety Program or ND Safe Kids <http://www.safekids.org/>

Firearms in the Home

Firearms must be kept in locked storage or trigger locks must be used, and ammunition must be kept separate from firearms. (NDAC 75-03-14-03)

Prescriptions

- Any prescribed medications used to treat a child must be ordered by a doctor.
- Over-the-counter medications should be used with caution because of possible allergic reactions. It is wise to consult the child's doctor when giving any of these medications to a child. Also, be sure to notify the child's case manager about the child's illnesses and treatment, if there is a case manager.
- Safety surrounding the distribution, storage, and disposal of medications in the home must be ensured. All medication (prescription, over the counter, vitamins) must be safely stored out of reach of children. They may think it is candy, use for pill parties, or use for suicide.

Day-to-Day Safety

You should take certain day-to-day safety measures including keeping the house and premises clean, neat, and free from hazards that jeopardize health and safety. The home for children should engage in proper trash disposal and be free from rodent and insect infestation. The family should be equipped with adequate light, heat, ventilation, and plumbing for safe and comfortable occupancy. The home and grounds should comply with any applicable state and local zoning requirements. (NDAC 75-03-14-03)

Remember that if the child you are caring for has experienced child maltreatment, they might have specific safety needs. As an example, if the child has been isolated, they might need extra support, instruction, and supervision regarding crossing streets, being in crowds of people, etc.

The childproofing lists seen on pages 60-61 can be found at the following website, <https://www.childproofingexperts.com/childproofing-checklist-by-age/> (Childproofing Checklist by Age, n.d.)

Childproofing Checklists

BY DEVELOPMENT / AGE

Newborn Before Baby is On-the-Go

It makes sense to begin child proofing before your child is on the go. Installing safety products develops good habits in parents and teaches children what is off-limits. Young babies reflexively bring their hands to their mouths, so it's important to think about choking hazards from an early age.

Begin child proofing your home by doing the following:

- Make sure baby's crib adheres to current safety standards as specified by the US Consumer Product Safety Commission.
- Keep baby's crib free of pillows, bumpers, stuffed animals, and blankets.
- Place baby monitors and their electrical cords at least three feet away from the crib.
- Retrofit or replace any corded window coverings. Any cord is a hazard.
- Use hands-on supervision during bath time and on the changing table.
- Install smoke alarms and carbon monoxide detectors.
- Get in the habit of closing the toilet lid; consider installing a latch.
- Install gates to prevent access to stairs and other areas parents wish to keep off-limits.
- Adjust water heater temperature to 120 degrees Fahrenheit.
- Create a storage area for purses and briefcases that is out of reach of children.
- Anchor TVs and furniture, including dressers and bookcases.
- Install a fence around any pool or hot tub. Install a pool alarm.

Crawling Curious Explorers

Crawling and cruising children will grab onto almost any surface and may pick up any visible item. Everything is new and exciting to them and they like to check out new items by tasting them. Make sure that crawlers can only access areas free of harm. As soon as your child begins rolling over, take care of all the items on the newborn list. In addition, child proofing for curious crawlers includes new steps.

- Cover electrical outlets lower than counter height and select products that are not choking hazards. (Remember your kitchen island!).
- Remove nightlights in any lower outlets.
- Use stationary play centers, not baby walkers.
- Cover sharp furniture edges and corners (or remove furniture).
- Pack up and put away breakables and valuables.
- Keep items away from the edges of tables and countertops.
- Secure and hide electrical cords, including lamp and appliance cords.
- Install latches on appliance and oven doors, or keep them securely closed at all times.
- Ensure that the area three to four feet up from the floor is free of choking hazards, including loose change, marbles, and rubber bands.
- Keep household cleaners and medicines up high (latches help, but children can defeat them).
- Learn and post the number for Poison Control: 1-800-222-1222.
- Turn pot handles inward on the stove and use back burners.
- Ensure stoves are anchored.
- Empty bathtubs and buckets of water immediately after use.
- Ask older siblings or visiting children to pick up their toys carefully after playing with parents double checking the area.

Toddler Very Active & Finds Trouble Quickly

Toddlers walk, run, and climb. As they won't always follow your instruction of "No," it is best to have safety gates installed early so that your child knows which rooms are off-limits. Be prepared to give lots of clear reminders about safety, as children this age cannot remember even simple rules. Make sure that the steps in the previous stages have been completed, and work on the following as well.

- Keep windows latched. Screens will not protect a child from a window fall.
- Lock doors to the outside.
- Keep household medications in child resistant containers and in a high cabinet.
- Never refer to medicine as "candy" or take your medicine in front of them. Toddlers like to imitate adults.
- Unplug small appliances and keep them out of reach.
- Remove sharp items from countertops.
- Secure doors to off-limit areas such as cellars and garages.
- Install stove knob covers.
- Create a space out of reach of children for small electronic devices to rest and charge.
- Place hot foods and liquids on the center of tables and countertops, not on edges, table cloths or placemats.
- Be careful with chairs & step stools especially for climbers!
- Ensure couches and other furniture are not placed next to balconies or railings.

Child The More they Do, the More Dangers they Find

Children ages three to five can understand why some items and actions are dangerous. Nonetheless, their impulses often push them to do what they know is forbidden. Your child will have likely outgrown their crib. At this age, children may use their improved motor skills to investigate rooms and items which have been designated off-limits.

- Double-check previously installed latches, locks, and gates, to see if your child is now able to overcome them.
- Explain to your child why certain items are dangerous, but do not expect them to obey you at all times.
- Continue keeping cleaners and medications out of reach.
- Teach children how to respond to the sound of a smoke alarm at home. Make an escape plan, and practice it with your kids.
- Check your smoke alarms each month.
- Keep matches and lighters up high and out of reach.
- Install window stops or guards on windows on upper floors.
- Do not allow children this age to use a microwave.
- Teach your child his or her full name, street address, and phone number.
- Continue adult supervision during bath time.
- Keep firearms unloaded and locked in a cabinet.
- Remove or retrofit any storage trunks or chests which cannot be opened from the inside.

Childproofing tasks should be started as soon as possible because children grow and develop at different rates. Remember, childproofing does not eliminate the need for supervision!

This list does not include all the possible hazards that exist in homes. This information is meant to be one of many resources you use in protecting your children.

Top 10 Household Hazards include:

1. Falls: Whether it is slipping on a wet floor after a shower or falling down the stairs, injuries due to falls are one of the most common household hazards.
2. Fire: Everything from candles to an unattended iron could lead to an accidental fire in your home, but there are many things a family can do to prevent a fire.
3. Carbon Monoxide: Accidental poisoning due to carbon monoxide in the home is becoming more common nationwide.
4. Choking: Dinner swallowed the wrong way, or a child accidentally swallowing a small item; the biggest household choking hazards come from small toys and hard foods that easily block airways, like peppermints or nuts.
5. Sharp Objects: We all understand the danger of sharp objects. Unfortunately, there are a number of necessary items used both inside and outside your home (knives, scissors, work bench tools, etc.) keep them out of the reach of children.
6. Paints/Chemicals: You just finished re-painting the living room and cannot wait to show off your work to friends and family. Discard of paint and chemicals properly and store them locked out of reach of children.
7. Window Cords: Cords on window dressings/blinds/curtains can present a strangling hazard to small children and infants.
8. Bathrooms: The highest risk of slipping and falling is in the bathroom; additional hazards include chemicals in soaps, makeup, perfumes, razors, and medications.
9. Dishwashers: Dishwashers help us get through after-dinner chores in half the time and require half the elbow grease. But this convenient appliance does pose some risks, especially to small children (heat, steam, knives, detergent pouches, etc.).
10. Stoves: Stoves present a danger. In addition to burning danger from hot implements, an improperly installed stove can easily tip over and crush toes, fingers, or worse.

Suicidal Ideation/Threats

Talk of suicide or suicidal gestures should be taken very seriously. Because of the impulsiveness of children, an action that starts out as attention-seeking could result in serious injury or death. Whenever you hear talk of suicide or see suicidal behavior, including letters, notes, or drawings, provide close adult supervision and seek mental help for the child. If there is a case manager involved, notify them of your concerns.

1. If there has been a suicide attempt, do not leave the child unattended.
2. If the child's condition warrants it, get immediate medical attention.

Suicide Warning Signs

What should you look for when concerned that a person may be suicidal?

A change in behavior or the presence of entirely new behaviors is a possible indicator. This is a concern if the behaviors are related to a painful event, a loss, or change in the child's life. Most individuals who take their own life exhibit one or more warning signs, either through what they say or what they do.

Ways to help

Connect the youth with various resources such as a counselor, online support groups, or hotlines. Be open to listening to their needs and helping them find solutions.

Suicide Hotline, call 9-8-8

It is available 24/7 serving anyone

National Crisis Text line – Text “HELLO” to 741741.

It is available 24/7 serving anyone and connecting them to a crisis counselor. The opening message can say anything, but “HELLO” is a good starting point.

Chapter 8: Understanding Legal

Caring for a child comes with legal needs, especially with school and medical needs. North Dakota has a few different types of legal identification for your rights in caring for a child: Power of Attorney (POA), Guardianship, Tribal custody, and Adoption. Each provide different rights in your ability to care for a child. At the very minimum you should try to get Power of Attorney.

On the next page is a comparison chart of Power of Attorney, Guardianship, and Adoption. Tribal custody was not included due to the variations in case-by-case and tribe.

Deciding on which legal arrangement you should have is between you and the parent, however, if ND child welfare or Tribal child welfare are involved your caseworker will be assisting in deciding the best arrangement.

Power of Attorney, also called POA

Provides short term permissions, a maximum of 6 months. Can be done with a notary.

Link to form: Power of Attorney Form

Guardianship

Provides long term permissions (1 year minimum length and longer). Must go through the courts.

Link to an overview of guardianship and how to determine the right form needed:

<https://www.ndcourts.gov/legal-self-help/minor-guardianship>

Tribal Custody

Varies based on Tribal court determination.

Adoption

Permanent; all rights are given. Must go through the courts.

AARP Foundation's Benefits QuickLINK

www.aarp.org/quicklink

What does it do?

A free and private way to find out if relatives or the children they are raising qualify for programs that pay for food, increase income, and cover home and healthcare costs. These benefits may include:

Public Benefits for Older Americans:

- Medicare Savings Programs
- Medicare Prescription Drug Coverage
- Medicare Rx Extra Help
- State Pharmaceutical Assistance programs (SPAP)
- Medicaid for Aged, Blind, and Disabled
- Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program (SNAP)
- Earned Income Tax Credit (EITC)
- Low Income Home Energy Assistance (LIHEAP)
- State Property Tax Relief/Rebates
- Supplemental Security Income (SSI)
- Telephone Assistance (Link-Up and Lifeline)

Public Benefits for Families Raising Children:

- Medicaid for Children
- State Children's Health Insurance Program (SCHIP)
- TANF-Child Only Grants
- Supplemental Security Income for Children

Affordable Connectivity Program

What does it do?

An FCC benefit program that helps ensure that households can afford the broadband they need for work, school, healthcare, and more. Provides a discount of up to $30 per month toward internet service for eligible households and up to $75 per month for households on qualifying Tribal lands. You may also be able to receive a one-time discount of up to $100 for the purchase of a laptop, desktop computer, or tablet from participating providers if they contribute more than $10 and less than $50 towards the purchase price. Limited to one monthly service discount and one device discount per household.

Requirements for Eligibility:

Household income at or below 200% of the Federal Poverty Guidelines or if a member of the household meets at least one of the criteria below:

- Received a Federal Pell Grant during the current award year.
- Meets eligibility criteria for a participating provider's existing low-income internet program

- Participates in one of the following assistance programs:
 - SNAP
 - Medicaid
 - Federal Housing Assistance
 - Supplemental Security Income (SSI)
 - Veterans Pension or Survivor Benefits
 - Lifeline
 - Free and Reduced-Price School Lunch Program or School Breakfast Program
- WIC
 - Participates in one of these assistance programs and lives on Qualifying Tribal Lands:
 - Bureau of Indian Affairs General Assistance
 - Tribal TANF
 - Food Distribution Program on Indian Reservations
 - Tribal Head Start (income based)

How to Apply

- Go to www.affordableconnectivity.gov to submit an application or print out an application to mail in
- Contact your preferred participating provider to select a plan and have the discount applied to your bill – some providers may have an alternative application.
- Eligible households must both apply for the program and contact a participating provider to select a service plan.

Family Caregiver Support Program

Family Caregiver Support Program | Health and Human Services North Dakota

What is it?

The NFCSP provides grants to states and territories, based on their share of the population age 70 and over, to fund a range of supports that assist family and informal caregivers to care for their loved ones at home for as long as possible through the enactment of Part E of the Older Americans Act of 1965. The goal is to support informal caregivers so they may continue to carry out their caregiving roles and responsibilities. The services work in conjunction with other state and community-based services to provide a coordinated set of supports.

Provides the following types of services:

- Information to caregivers about available services
- Assistance to caregivers in gaining access to the services
- Individual caregiver counseling
- Caregiver support groups
- Caregiver training
- Respite care (in-home and/or out-of-home)
 - Only for caregivers of "frail" older adults – an adult age 60+ who is functionally impaired
- Supplemental services, on a limited basis
 - Only for caregivers of "frail" older adults – an adult age 60+ who is functionally impaired

Requirements for Eligibility:

Must meet one of the following criteria:

- Adult family members or other informal caregivers aged 18 and older providing care to individuals age 60 or older
 - Person being cared for must need help with at least 2 Activities of Daily Living (eating, dressing, bathing, toileting, mobility, personal hygiene, and/or transferring from bed to chair)
- Adult family members or other informal caregivers aged 18 and older providing care to individuals of ANY age with Alzheimer's disease and related disorders
 - Person being cared for must need help with at least 2 Activities of Daily Living

(eating, dressing, bathing, toileting, mobility, personal hygiene, and/or transferring from bed to chair)

- Older relatives (not parents) age 55 and older providing care to children under the age of 18
- Older relatives, including parents, age 55 and older providing care to adults age 18-59 with disabilities

Grandfamilies State Law and Policy Resource Center

Home \(grandfamilies.org\)

What is it?

A national legal resource in support of grandfamilies within and outside the child welfare system. Their mission is to:

- Educate individuals about state laws, legislation, and policy in support of grandfamilies
- Assist interested policymakers, advocates, caregivers, and attorneys in exploring policy options to support relatives and the children in their care
- Provide technical assistance and training

They provide technical assistance to help assist national, state, regional, and local child welfare agencies with implementing federal child welfare laws including:

- Family First Prevention Services Act of 2018 (Family Foster Home Licensing Standards, and Kinship Navigator Programs)
- Preventing Sex Trafficking and Strengthening Families Act of 2014
- Fostering Connections to Success and Increasing Adoptions Act of 2008

Guardianship Assistance Program (GAP)/ Subsidized Guardianship Program

What is it?

There is a state-funded GAP program and a federal IV-E GAP program. Provide monthly payment to the eligible guardian who provides care to an eligible child. Please note there is a cap on participants, so availability is limited.

The guardian must:

- Pass a criminal background check and a home study.
- Received contingent approval for a subsidy for the child's needs prior to the guardianship appointment
- Be an adult (with preference given to those who are at least 21 years of age)

State funded:

- Eligibility
 - Child in ND foster care under the custody of a Human Service Zone, Division of Juvenile Services, or a Tribal Nation

- Reunification has been ruled out
- Adoption has been ruled out
- One sibling is 12 years of age or older
- Maintenance Payment
 - Payments based on legislative appropriation
 - Payment eligibility will be reviewed upon the child's 18th birthday
 - Child is eligible for Medicaid if residing in ND

Federally funded:

- Eligibility
 - Child meets all criteria identified on the state-funded GAP
 - Child is IV-E eligible
 - Child is under the age of 18
 - Child must be placed with the licensed relative foster parent for at least 6 consecutive months
 - Guardian must be a licensed foster parent who meets the definition of an identified relative by NDCC 50-11
 - Demonstrate strong attachment to the prospective guardian and the prospective guardian has a strong commitment to caring permanently for the child
 - Prospective guardians verify that the guardianship cannot occur without a Guardianship Assistance Agreement because the child's present and anticipated future needs have been determined to exceed the family's ability to meet those needs without assistance.
- Maintenance Payment
 - Established in conjunction with the department's guardianship rates
 - Payment eligibility will be reviewed upon the child's 18th birthday
 - Child is categorically eligible for Medicaid regardless of state of residence

Subsidized Guardianship:

Eligibility:

- The child must be in foster care
- Consideration for guardianship is the responsibility of the child's custodian (Human Services Zone office/ county social services, Division of Juvenile Services, or tribe) working with the permanency planning committee.
- Youth age 16-18 will be given priority. Sibling groups which include a youth in the 16-18 age group will also be given priority consideration

How do I establish Subsidized Guardianship?

It is the social worker's role to assist the prospective legal guardian in applying for the subsidy program, to make available general background information about the legal aspects of guardianship, and to assist the prospective guardian, if necessary, in securing legal counsel.

When does the subsidy end?

A guardianship subsidy would cease under the following conditions:

1. Child reaches age 18 and is not in school
 2. Child custody or guardianship is awarded to another person
 3. Child is incarcerated
 4. Child is no longer living in the home
 5. Child dies
 6. Guardianship terminates for any reason
 7. CFS does not have guardian's current address, and mail is undeliverable
- If the ward/guardianship relationship continues after the order appointing the guardian terminated at age 18, and the ward continues school, the subsidy may be continued. The ward and guardian may apply for continuation of the subsidy, prior to its expiration at age 18. Refer to SFN 1830: "Application for Continued Subsidy After Age 18"

Survivors Benefits – Social Security

<https://www.ssa.gov/benefits/survivors/>

What is it?

Financial benefit paid to widows, widowers, and dependents of eligible workers. In the event of someone's death, their spouse, children, and parents may be eligible for benefits based on the earnings of the deceased.

- They must have been working long enough in jobs insured under Social Security to qualify for benefits.

What is available?

Certain family members may be eligible to receive monthly benefits. These members may be:

- A widow or widower age 60 or older (or age 50 or older if disabled)
- A widow or widower of any age caring for the deceased's child who is under age 16 or disabled
- An unmarried child of the deceased who is either
 - Younger than age 18 (or up to age 19 if a full-time student in elementary or secondary school)
 - Age 18 or older with a disability that began before age 22
- A stepchild, grandchild, step-grandchild, or adopted child under certain circumstances
- Parents, age 62 or older, who were dependent on the deceased for at least half of their support
- A surviving divorced spouse, under certain circumstances

How do I apply for Survivors Benefits?

- In most cases, the funeral home will report the person's death to Social Security; you will need to provide the funeral home with the deceased's Social Security number. If you want to report a death yourself or apply for benefits, you will need to call 1-800-772-1213 (TTY 1-800-325-0778) between 8:00 am and 7:00 pm Monday through Friday. You can use this link: Social Security Office Locator to find the phone number of your local office; look under "Social Security Office Information" and locate the toll-free "Office" number.

If you choose to mail documents, you must include the Social Security number (on a separate piece of paper in the same mailing envelope) so that Social Security can match it with the correct application. Do not write on the original documents.

TANF (Temporary Assistance for Needy Families)

Temporary Assistance for Needy Families \(TANF\) | Health and Human Services North Dakota

There are 3 different TANF programs: TANF, TANF Kinship Care, and Child-Only TANF. For all three of these programs, any children included in the TANF benefit MUST be related by blood, marriage, or adoption. A single adult cannot receive TANF; you must be caring for a dependent child.

On the next pages you will find a summary of TANF, followed by specifics for each program and information on the JOBS and Tribal NEW programs (the work readiness programs that may be required as part of participation in TANF).

What does it do?

Helps low-income families to become free of public assistance and become self-sufficient by providing cash assistance along with work readiness, training, and job placement services.

Eligibility Requirements:

- Children are under the age of 18 or will graduate high school by age 19
 - And related to the adult they are residing with by blood, marriage, or adoption
- Must be a US citizen or meet requirements for immigration status
- Must meet low-income guidelines and asset limits

How to apply?

- Apply online at www.applyforhelp.nd.gov
 - Complete SFN405
- Contact your local Human Service Zone office
- Request to have an application mailed to you for you to fill out and return

How does it work?

- Once approved, you receive an Electronic Payment Card (EPC) in the mail. Benefits will be added to this card monthly.
 - Your EPC can be used at grocery stores, gas stations, restaurants, department and discount stores, online stores, or to pay bills for doctors, dentists, utilities, etc.

Other notes:

- The state cannot provide TANF benefits to households that include an adult who has received TANF assistance for a total of 60 months (some exceptions apply)
- Any child support that is due while you are receiving TANF will be kept by the State of North Dakota, up to the amount of TANF benefits you receive

- Children in TANF Kinship Care may be eligible for Medicaid

TANF:

- Temporary financial assistance to low-income families (must include at least one adult caring for at least one dependent child).
 - If you are in your third trimester of pregnancy, you may also qualify
 - In families with one or more adults, must be involved in work activities that will help you transition off TANF and become more economically self-sufficient
 - Average 20 hours per week if you have a child under age 6; average 30 hours per week if you do not have a child under age 6
 - Must participate in the Job Opportunity and Basic Skills (JOBS) program or the Tribal NEW program. Some exceptions apply

TANF Kinship Care:

- An alternative to out-of-home foster care that places children in the homes of relatives.
 - Children:
 - Must be in foster care under the care, custody, and control of the Human Service Zone, Division of Juvenile Services, or a North Dakota tribal agency
 - Must be under age 18 (unless the child is enrolled in high school full-time and is expected to graduate before age 19)
 - Must meet citizenship and other TANF requirements
 - Cannot receive Supplemental Security Income
 - Caregivers:
 - Must be related by blood, marriage, or adoption
 - Must sign a TANF Kinship Care Agreement and participate in required background checks
 - Must complete an application for TANF benefits and interview
 - Must pass an income test based on the child only
 - Must cooperate with the Child Support Division to pursue support from the legally responsible parents

TANF (Child Only):

- Financial assistance for eligible children when their parent is ineligible to receive TANF assistance, or when a child is living with another adult (related by blood, marriage, or adoption) who is ineligible to receive TANF assistance. In these cases, no adult is included in the benefit calculations.

Work readiness programs – some may have to participate to get TANF assistance

More about the JOBS program:

- If you are receiving TANF benefits, you must participate in work activities
 - Unless:
 - You are over age 65

- You are a parent or caretaker of a child under two months of age
- You receive Supplemental Security Income (SSI) or Social Security Disability Income (SSDI)
- You are a parent providing care for a disabled family member living in the home
- You are a teen enrolled in school full-time
- If you are a dependent child who is age 16 or older and not in school, you must participate in work activities
- Financial assistance may be available to assist you in getting a job or attending work activities
 - Money for gas, car repairs, taxi, bus fare, or paying others for rides
